WEEKLY THOUGHTS JANUARY 13, 2019

Greetings.

Well, the Christmas season now ends and we return to the season of Ordinary Time in our Church calendar. It is not to be viewed or understood as "ordinary" in the sense of nothing special. In the Advent, Christmas, Lent, and Easter seasons, we have a particular focus that is related to the great celebration at the culmination(or end) of that particular season (i.e. Christmas and Easter). In ordinary time, we focus on the everyday life and earthly ministry of Jesus. We will hear passages dealing with the time he spent with his apostles as well as his time spent in teaching and healing ministry...definitely out of the "ordinary." We will be in Ordinary Time until March 6th, when we will celebrate Ash Wednesday and begin the season of Lent.

One further item. When I was teaching, I had a website that I used in my courses. I have made the site available to our parish school faculty and our faith formation team. It is also available to anyone else who wishes to use it. The site contains audio recordings of my homilies, faith resources, PowerPoint presentations, links to other sites, parish and school information, etc. I will try to make regular updates to the site with new information.

The site can be found at www.virtualclassroom.net/ht

Staying With

Sunday marks last day of the Church's Christmas season. Jesus' birth has now been celebrated. His public life comes next. His baptism begins it.

I know, I know, Christmas has been over for ages and we have gone on with life. The American custom is in force: just days to rip down decorations and go on to the next thing.

But now we begin Jesus' public life, beginning with Baptism.

We hear the voice of God the Father speaking to him:*

You are my beloved Son; in you I am well pleased (Gospel).

Wouldn't Jesus or anyone else want to hear such words over and over? The beloved of God! It is like having candy and circuses and ice cream and all your favorite things. God has settled upon you as his special one. Everything will be fine.

Except that "being fine" does not turn out to be the true meaning of being beloved.

Let me illustrate with a story.

I was visiting a Jesuit friend of mine in Washington DC, Pete, who is a prankster. He was in the kitchen cooking up homemade spaghetti. Icky mess.

I asked him what time we were due to be somewhere or other, and he said "I don't know, but we can ask Joe." Joe was another Jesuit who on that Saturday was working at his job at an official Jesuit building. Pete put the kitchen phone on its speaker and floured in the phone number.

Joe answered and Pete said, "hi, how are you doing, Joseph?" Joe said, "just great." Pete said, "how wonderful, since you are spending your weekend working."

Joe came back semi-humorously and said, "No it is ok. God told me everything was going to be fine."

Without skipping a beat Pete said, "Yeah that's what he told his Son."

I was on the floor laughing at such a quick, piercing reply, seemingly delivered with no forethought at all.

But notice what is behind that joke. God does in fact tolerate pain and suffering for his beloved son on the cross. This is the other side of being "The Beloved" of God.

Suffering and temptation.

Jesus had gone to the desert to ponder the words he heard from the Baptist. But there the devil offered huge, slick temptations: be big, like me. Build up your earthly power and honor, use your new public status as "Beloved."

This was directly and deeply contrary to Jesus' mission, of course, but God let such a temptation happen.

Why?

Well, God is like a parent watching a teenager's growing pains. Help all you can, but definitely do not stop the growing. Temptation and suffering create an urgent need for a person to open up, to broaden their scope, to understand better what love is, to see that love does not mean God taking charge and making everything alright, but rather it means his staying with you, the beloved, continuing to love and admire you, but not just taking over. Love at its root means sharing another's life, not taking it over.

To paraphrase the Father's words at the Jordan:

Receive my love that never runs away, never lets go, even in the desert, even on the cross.

SAINT OF THE WEEK & DIOCESAN NOTES

St. Raymond of Peñafort, Priest, 1175-1275

Raymond was born at Villafranca de Benadis, near Barcelona, in 1175 to the noble family of Peñafort, related to the kings of Aragon. A very bright boy, he received the best education available and, at the age of twenty, was professor of philosophy at the Cathedral School of Barcelona.

An interest in law prompted Raymond to move to Bologna in 1210 where he completed his doctoral degrees in both civil and canon law. Occupying a chair in canon law at the university in Bologna for a few years, Raymond became interested in the Dominican order which was drawing a number of his brighter students and fellow professors into their ranks. Returning to Barcelona in 1219, Raymond had the opportunity to meet St. Dominic. Also in this year, Raymond was appointed archdeacon of Barcelona by the bishop.

In 1222, in the year after St. Dominic's death, Raymond, at the age of forty-seven decided that he too was being called to the Dominican order. Part of his reasoning for this decision was that he had grown too self-satisfied with his accomplishments. Recognizing this, he asked the novice master to assign to him the most onerous and demeaning tasks so that he might overcome his vanity. One of the assignments given to Raymond was to use his skills in canon law to assemble for the guidance of confessors a listing of all of the rules which had been worked out by the Church over the centuries for dealing with sins and sinners. The result was a unique compilation, Summa de casibus poenitentialibus (Summary of penitential cases).

Fr. Raymond's wisdom and humility gained wide recognition. King James of Aragon chose the priest as his spiritual director, as did St. Peter Nolasco, the founder of the Order of Our Lady of Ransom, also known as the Mercedarians, an order dedicated to ransoming captives held by the Moors.

In 1230, Pope Gregory IX summoned him to Rome where he became the pope's confessor. Gregory also had Raymond edit and codify the many canons of the Church which had been written over the centuries. Some of the more recent canons were restatements of earlier papal bulls and, in many cases, contradicted the earlier decrees. This comprehensive work took several years to complete and remained the most comprehensive authority on canon law until 1917 when a new code was written.

In recognition of Raymond's work, Pope Gregory IX named him archbishop of Tarragona in Aragon in 1235. Pleading to be relieved of this appointment, Raymond returned to Barcelona where he resumed the quiet prayerful life which he was drawn to. This seclusion was not to last however. In 1238, his brothers elected him as Superior General of the Dominicans. Reluctantly, Raymond accepted this appointment and undertook the task of reforming, clarifying, and putting into permanent form the constitution of the Dominican order. He included in this work that the voluntary resignation of the superior, for just reason, should be accepted. This work was accepted by the Dominicans at three general chapters and remained in effect until 1924.

In 1240, pleading old age and illness, Raymond resigned as superior. While he was able to return to his life of prayer and seclusion, Raymond lived another 35 years to his 100th year.

St. Raymond of Peñafort is the patron of attorneys, canon lawyers, and medial record librarians. He is honored by an optional memorial on January 7.

Raymond's message today: God gives each one of us many talents. It is important how we use them. Raymond recognized that it is easy to forget where these gifts came from and that they are not created by ourselves, but must be used for God's work.

† What gifts have you been given? How are you using them?
