A PERFECT GIFT

Soon after the birth of my son Charlie*, who has Down syndrome, a visitor asked whether he was "mild, moderate, or severe"—referring to his level of cognitive impairment. I knew the terminology, but the question shocked me. In my arms I held my beautiful baby boy, who defied easy categorization. Clinical labels may describe some aspects of an individual's "functioning," but they don't tell the whole story. Labels could not describe how Charlie's smile lit up a room or how the sweetness of his soul had captured our hearts so completely.

RELATIONSHIP CHANGES EVERYTHING

I have since come to understand that clinical categories also miss another important dimension of personhood: we are created to be in relationship with others. As Pope Saint John Paul II said in his encyclical Evangelium vitae (The Gospel of Life), "Within the family each member is accepted, respected and honored precisely because he or she is a person; and if any family member is in greater need, the care which he or she receives is all the more intense and attentive."[i]

Charlie does well because we love him and attend to him out of that love. We make accommodations to compensate for the challenges that arise, and his strengths become more apparent. He plays an integral role in our family's happiness. For example, he is our most empathetic child—the first to notice and offer comfort when we are hurt.

People often say, "I could never handle a child with a disability." But the beauty of parenting is that you aren't given a child with a disability. You are given your child with a disability. Your child enters the world in a relationship with you, and that changes everything. You are not called to "handle" a disability. You are called to love a particular person, and caring for him or her grows out of that love. The challenges that come with his diagnosis make up only a small part of life with our wonderful little boy.

STAINED GLASS

I once read an article in which a woman discussed the reasons for aborting her child with Down syndrome. The deal-breaker was watching a boy with Down syndrome at a restaurant with his parents: they had to hand-feed him a slice of pizza and wipe his face with a napkin. This hit home for me. We weaned Charlie off a feeding tube when he was seven, spoon-feeding him and often wiping his face afterwards. I wonder how many people saw us and decided a life like his isn't worth living. Had anyone asked, I would have said, "It might look a little crazy from the outside, but he's an amazing little boy, and it's a good life.

It's like looking at a stained-glass window from the outside: the colors look dark, and you can't quite make out the figures. From the inside, however, with the sun shining through it, the effect can be brilliant. From inside our family, love illuminates our life with Charlie. What may seem dreary to others, perhaps even unbearable, is actually filled with beauty and color. We know, for instance, that Charlie worked hard to gain basic feeding skills that most people take for granted, and we are so proud of his valiant efforts.

PERFECTION

Many parents want perfect children, and our culture is obsessed with superficial perfection. Photos are airbrushed, and social media depicts seemingly perfect lives. However, God calls us to seek perfection not in appearance or abilities, but in love.

Christians know what perfect love looks like—Jesus offering himself on the Cross. Love in a family where one member has a serious disability may look unappealing from the outside. Indeed, love in any family is messy; there are faces to wipe and sacrifices to make. It's natural to fear that such sacrifices will require too much, but this is where the deep mystery of sacrificial love becomes apparent.

In our family, we have found that our hearts, rather than being weighed down, have become larger. Caring for Charlie has given us more patience, more compassion and more love for others—especially those on the outskirts of society, whom Pope Francis so often calls us to care for.

A FUNDAMENTAL TRUTH

Perhaps this is why so many families of children with disabilities, despite difficulties, often radiate joy. When I meet another parent of a child with Down syndrome, there is usually a moment of instant recognition and understanding. Our eyes meet, and we smile conspiratorially, as if we're in on the same secret: the fundamental truth that every life is a good and prefect gift.

Many know this on an intellectual level, but those who love someone with a disability see it in their loved one's face in a particular way. Our love for our children has nothing to do with their abilities. We love them simply because of who they are and understanding this teaches us how to truly love everyone. We also begin to understand our own worth, which depends not on our skills or appearance, but solely on the fact that we are created in the image and likeness of God and loved by Him. Our lives—all our lives—are worth living.

Name changed for privacy. The author has a Ph.D. in developmental psychology and has been advocating since the birth of her son Charlie for children who are prenatally diagnosed with disabilities.

NOTES ON THE MASS DEC 5 2021

SPIRITUALITY OF THE READING

Prepare the Way

Now begins the second week of the Church's world-wide retreat in preparation for Christmas.

It is Advent, the quiet time, the great contrast with our culture's wild consumer-bonanza. It lets you and me examine just how open we are to the birth of Christ in our souls.

No mistake about it, we are afraid. The present era of world time discourages many of us.

Terrorism desiring to destroy our way of life, for one thing. But add in Iraq, Palestine, Chechnya, Afghanistan, Georgia, Africa, the Balkans, and so many more. And consider the gigantic unemployment and loss of jobs in the United States, the disenfranchisement of the poor, the biggest annual deficit in history, huge corruption in the most trusted and giant companies, the biggest annual budget spending increases in history, and the world-wide climate disaster—who would not be depressed?

Parents in the United States worry themselves either too little or too much about conditions for their growing children. Not just the unstoppable sale and use of drugs in high-schools and grade schools, not just sexual promiscuity as a way of life that is being aggressively marketed to the youth segment of the population, but also the increasing collapse of values that we call the "new morality," but which is really dissolution.

In the face of all this, who can just sit back and have Advent?

But listen to what the First Reading proposes for our Advent retreat.

> "Take off your robe of mourning and misery; put on the splendor of glory from God forever: wrapped in the cloak of justice from God, bear on your head the mitre that displays the glory of the eternal name. God will show all the earth your splendor: you will be named by God forever as the peace of justice, the glory of God's worship."

Has someone quietly lost their mind? Or is Church just irreparably cut off from the "real world," hiding in pews and doting on a comforting and "nice" view of life?

Neither.

We are being asked to let our approach to life and to tragedy undergo some revision, some stretching.

The one who is gestating right now in our hearts, the one who is to be born there very soon, that one comes not to make the world pleasant and polite, but to connect it at its very roots with the mysterious depths of God, that one is on the way.

What does it mean to have widespread terrorist factions planning to throw down our life and all that surrounds it? The One who wants to be born in us knows the answer intimately well. This happened to him. What does it mean to have failure and disillusion as your daily bread? He knows that too and he has been there.

So the question is, will you let him be born in you this year, a little more than in the past? Are you willing to let your womb stretch wider than ever before and so make room?

"Yes, but ... "
Is that your response?

Well, be at rest. You do not have to be capable of such a Christ-like feat all by yourself. As Paul says in the Second Reading, "the one who began the good work in you will continue to complete it until the day of Christ Jesus." The tender care of God and of his carefully-tending mother are with you just as they promised, if you will allow them to help.

Against this background, the Gospel begins the Advent storytelling that is such native soil to human beings. Once upon a time the word of God came to John, son of Zechariah (John the Baptist) in the desert, and he began announcing the coming of Jesus. Listen.
Let us do all we can to "prepare the way of the Lord."

John Foley, SJ

BRING THE GOSPEL HOME DEC 5 2021

READING I Baruch 5:1-9

PSALM 126:1-6

READING II Philippians 1:4-11

GOSPEL Luke 3:1-6

Question for Children: What things do you do to get ready for a big event or celebration?

Question for Youth: How do you share the Good News of Jesus with others?

Question for Adults: Name one thing you can do to help "prepare the way of the Lord?"

Use these activities as a way to further reflect on the Sunday readings:

- Make a banner that reads: "Prepare the Way of the Lord". Use poster paper and decorate the banner with crayons or markers. Ask each family member to share what he or she can do this week to clear the way for the coming of Jesus.
- Discuss with your family what "rocks" need to be cleared from your family so you will be a more loving family, working together for the Lord.

SAINT OF THE WEEK

Ambrose, Bishop and Doctor

Ambrose was a brilliant lawyer and while speaking to an assembly at a church while they were selecting a bishop, was nominated for bishop himself. He had never been baptized, but when he did decide to become baptized, was elected bishop one week later. He began studying Sacred Scripture and the writings of great religious scholars. He spoke against the Arian heresy and had it mostly eliminated from his diocese. Saint Augustine studied with him, was baptized by him, and was a strong supporter. Saint Ambrose was a strong political and religious figure who used his power to fair and just ends.

Ambrose's message today: As bishop of Milan, Ambrose held much power, both in his diocese as well as in the empire itself. Yet he was very careful to use the power to fair and just ends. Above all, he followed Scripture and Church teachings as his true guide.

Do you, as a supervisor, a manager, or a parent, use your authority in a wise and just manner?

Taking the Journey TOGETHER

A PRAYER FOR THE Second Sunday of Advent

Jesus, you came among us
with the irresistible power of a baby, requiring both our hands
and captivating our whole hearts.
Help us to cast aside the sin and brokenness that we cling to,
so we might be ready to hold you when you come again.
Amen.
